Women presidential candidates are focus of DePaul Art Museum window installation. CHICAGO — The United States has never had a woman president, but the list of trailblazing women who have run for the office is longer than many realize. Ahead of the 2020 election, the front windows of DePaul Art Museum will feature work by artist Kathryn Andrews that highlights the biases in the country’s political system by listing the names of all 87 women who have run for president in the U.S., some dating back to before women had the right to vote.
